“ There are so many memories...all the fun times playing in Aunt Shirl's yard when we were little (now Jimmy and Rexy's:) The outhouse in the woods, the spruce trees by the road, the pool table and fully carpeted game room (including the walls? Or am i making that part up in my mind, lol. Lotsa fun down there). I remember playing down there with Rachel when Aunt Shirl called down to ask which one of us would like to vaccuum for her.. we both looked at each other for a while and then i reluctantly said, "i will". She gave me a dollar:) How many times did I look at the silhouette pictures in her hallway. I loved the candy dish on top of the piano at Christmas time, the blue living room. She always said to me when I was little "well, Bets, what do you know" (uncle Jim might still ask me that, lol!). I remember the way she would stand with her weight shifted onto 1 leg with her hip out (why do all of my memories of her before her stroke include her standing (Maybe because she was always doing something?). How many card games did we play after she had the stroke? How slow she was to put her cards down when it was her turn and then how sneaky she was when she'd lay everything down at once to win the game! How she would "freeze" the pile when her partner had a mitfull of cards in their hands (grrrr) (you canasta players will know what I'm talking about!). Blueberry picking will not be the same without Aunt Shirl and Gram sitting in the shade of a big bush and Aunt Nance down a few rows with mom "discussing" who was the bossier sister (sigh... aunt nance, I will forever feel bad about hurting your feelings. I have since learned to be diplomatic and to NEVER answer questions about which sister is most bossy!) I miss you all and now Aunt Shirl, the aunt who loves purple, as well. Rest peacefully, Aunty Shirley.

“ I remember when she lived at the house attached to the motel, and she would play her guitar, sing and yodel. I loved it:) she was such a kind soul, and her life was a beautiful example of it. Rest in piece Aunt Sheryl, and say hi to my dad up there, I'm sure they were all there welcoming you home with open arms.

“ I remember playing Kanasta with her and Grandma Schloer, stringing popcorn for the Christmas tree, and bringing her breakfast in bed when she lived with us. I also remember her miraculous recovery from her aneurysm. She displayed so much strength and TRUST IN GOD. Now she is with my mom, Uncle Tom, Uncle Mike, Uncle Johnny, Grandma and Grandpa and all the family together at the Lord's own wedding feast! May God grant us all a faith like hers!
